Local Veterans Register Kick re Mayor's Letter; Permit to Issue for Big Addition to Hero Cafe; Extra Night Police During Rush of Utility Work; Curfew Bylaw Not Yet Prepared; Cemetery to be Trimmed Up.

With coats off and sleeves rolled, the members of the Town Council met on Tuesday of last week, and despite the terrible heat, tackled a fairly full agenda with dispatch, as is to be expected of a body of men. During the session, arguments which arose threatened at times to increase the temperature, but things were smoothed out each time, and a decision arrived at satisfactory to all. After the adoption of the former minutes a letter was read from Mr. Walter Campbell, president of the Wainwright Gas Co., with reference to the franchise matter, in which he pointed out that he was not in a position to deal in any sale of company's works and plant until such time as his shareholders had had a chance to deal with the Council's offer, but that as soon as it was possible to call such a meeting and arrive at a decision the information sought would be placed before Council. After a general discussion of the matter the motion by Coun. Link that the letter be tabled till the next regular meeting, or be the subject of a special meeting if the information

Rains Badly Needed Says Report No. 3

The crop report issued by the department says that from June 9th to 12th, splendid rains were general in south-western Alberta as far as Red Deer. Heavy precipitation is reported near Cardston with approximately 5 inches. An average of from 2 to 3 inches fell from Lethbridge north. As a consequence prospects are bright for a reasonably good grain crop.

In south-eastern districts the rainfall has been much lighter and only heavy rains at an early date will avert almost complete crop failure. Conditions are somewhat better below the main line of the C.P.R. From Lacombe north to Athabasca and east to Saskatchewan precipitation has been limited quite entirely to scattered showers since early in the crop season and all of this area needs a good general rain soon to insure even a fair crop. Prospects are brighter in the Vermilion-Lloydminster district where rains have been heavier and more frequent.

Conditions in the Peace River district are less favourable than earlier in the season. Heavy crop will be light to medium. A good general rain would be welcome.

Mr. Roy McLaughlin of Holden spent a couple of days in town over the week end.

Power Gang Tops at Softball Game

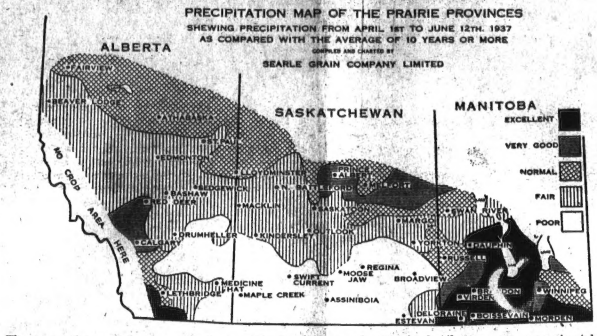

In a challenge game of softball played Friday night, the Power Gang continued their winning ways by turning back the newest entry into Wainwright's softball ranks, led by George Clark, by a score of 21-10.

This was the first encounter for these two teams and from the class and rivalry shown, the future games should hold plenty of interest for all. Clark's team built up a big lead in the first two innings but the Power Gang turned on full capacity to draw up even and then go on to win. Henry Schmitt adopted a "bushy" role by hitting two homers during the game.

We understand that there is still another team in the sorting stage and it is planned to start a local league when four or more teams are organized. In this regard a local sportsman has donated a challenge cup for competition within a local league; so you old ball players had better get your names in a batting list right away.

The line-up was—
Power Gang—C. Ricker, Ken Vary, V. Nelson, F. Wright, Spud Coffield, H. Schmitt, H. Brunschweiler, L. Baxter and J. Keenan.
Clark's—M. Paterson, Geo. Clark, F. Pardee, E. Springbett, R. McIvor, H. Wilson, E. Smith, F. Sheffield and P. Stevens.
Umpire—H. Coffield.

WHERE THEY GOT THE RAIN ----

The map printed above shows the distribution of the precipitation that has occurred over the Prairie Provinces from April 1st to June 12th, 1937, inclusive. It will be noted that the condition over Manitoba is, in the main, excellent, with other very good areas in north-eastern Saskatchewan and along the foothills in south-western Alberta. A large strip through central Saskatchewan and central Alberta, however, is only fair. Other areas in northern Alberta and Sas-

EVERYTHING SET FOR JULY FIRST CELEBRATION

Arrangements are about complete for the big celebration to be held next week in commemoration of Dominion Day and Wainwright's annual birthday. The committees have spared no effort to give all a sundry day's pleasure, and with baseball, softball, kiddies' races, and so forth there should be plenty to keep the big crowd anticipated well amused till shades of evening gather. The parade down Main street to the fair grounds, led by the Town Band will start off the affair at eleven a.m. sharp and is promised to surpass former years, a number of floats being prepared for entry for the prizes hung up for them, and comics and cars are to share in these also.

Both senior and intermediate ball games are being arranged for and the softball ladies and girls will no doubt see the usual large number of competitors for the prize money. The visitors will be welcomed as usual by the Mayor, from the platform at the grounds, and an innovation this year will be the patriotic addresses to be delivered by young men in high school training. All the kiddies in the parade are to receive their usual treats, too, and later in the day will participate in foot races for still more prize money.

During the "daylight" hours, the band boys will play from the bandstand, and notice of each event will be given over the P.A. system in the hands of Mr. Frank Wright. Side attractions will add to the pleasure of the day, and the youngsters will no doubt enjoy the merry-go-round which has been engaged for the day. Bingo, doll shies, and other amusements will be there, too. The refreshment question for all is being looked after by ladies of some of the churches and taken altogether July First promises to be among the outstanding celebrations of the Town of Wainwright.

In addition to the attractions at the grounds, the Elite theatre will be showing the special feature picture "Swing Time" with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the leading roles, and this will run continuously from 2:30 p.m. onward, with matinee prices until 5:30, and at 10 p.m. the big dance will commence to run until everyone is satisfied to "call it a day!"

Come to Wainwright for a real enjoyable day on THE FIRST!

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Sam Griebrok and family, also brothers Ole and Gerald, wish to thank their many friends and neighbors, as well as Sunnyside U.E.W.A. and Saddle Hills school, for their beautiful floral tributes and cards of sympathy in their recent bereavement.

Local A.T.A. Spring Rally

The Viking-Wainwright local of the A.T.A. held the annual spring rally in Viking on Saturday, June 12th. The meeting was well attended and many important questions were discussed.

The election of officers for the coming term resulted as follows:—President, I. S. Reeds; Irma; vice-pres., W. R. Dean; Viking; sec-treas., G. A. Taylor; Kinross; press-corres., Miss M. Darrah, Wainwright. Mr. Martin of Irma, gave a report of the sports meet held recently which proved quite a success, despite the unsettled weather.

Mr. Dean of Viking reported on the annual convention held in Edmonton at Easter. Plans for the fall track meet were discussed and it was decided to hold this in Wainwright on October 1. Mr. J. A. Smith of Paradise Valley, gave many worthwhile suggestions regarding the annual track meet.

Dr. M. E. Lazerte president of the A.T.A. was the main speaker of the afternoon. The theme of his address was a "four S" programme—standards, salary, security and standards. Henry Schmitt adopted a challenge role by hitting two homers during the game.

MINISTER'S APPROVAL WILL BE AWAITED BY HOSP. BD.

The regular meeting of the Wainwright hospital board was held on Saturday June 12th with all trustees in attendance.

Following the adoption of the minutes of the previous meeting, Moved by Trustee Gould—That free hospitalization for the rate-payers of the hospital lying within the Vale municipal district be allowed from August 1st, 1937, if approved by the minister.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Collette—That the letters from Rev. J. E. McGraw and Atlas Lumber Co. be filed.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Headale—That the G.R. Edge M.D. council be notified that the hospital board have no authority to reduce indigent accounts, and also that it be drawn to their attention that the rate of $1.00 per day plus $6.00 is a great deal less than the actual cost of hospitalization.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Collette—That the matter of purchase of an electro-tube be tabled.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Gardner—That a garden cultivator be purchased.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Gould—That the account of H. Coffield for painting be tabled.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Gardner—That the secretary write to Dr. Brathwaite to arrange a date for meeting the Board and the doctors using the hospital.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Collette—That the matron be authorized to purchase a tuner for the x-ray machine.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

Why Penalize The Car Owner?

The authority which governments take to impose legal prohibitions on business, might with propriety sometimes be applied to themselves. Is there any tenable argument, for instance, why car owners should be singled out as the victims of the persistently frequently budget-bolting grabs of the taxing authorities. The motorist of small income gives from 12 to 35 days of his year's work to pay taxes clamped upon him simply because he owns a car. This was a recent finding of a survey conducted by the American Automobile Association, the accuracy of which may be challenged in some quarters on the ground of bias.

But the motorist will suspect it may be on the side of conservatism. He does not need to be told that over Canada as a whole the automotive tax burden he now bears is out of all proportion to his income. Neither does he need to be told that the levy on gasoline is an undisciplined sales tax on a necessity for thousands in his income class. Nor does he require an adding machine to prove to his satisfaction that it falls heaviest on the man of moderate means who can least afford to pay it.

His plight would be bad enough if his money were used for his benefit. But when most of it is diverted to other purposes, surely as a matter of common fairness, there ought to be a legal prohibition against such wholesale diversion.

Famous Best-Seller Comes to Screen

The potential entertainment appeal of living romance and drama has, in "Anthony Adverse" been transferred to the screen with sincerity, dignity and faithfulness. It is intense emotional drama, laid down honestly and in such straightforward spirit that it is beyond argument that the picture will arouse the curiosity, hold the interest and satisfy all who see it.

It provides a title that is widely familiar, a good story, and artistic effects that overlook no detail in bringing the story to the screen in the full scope of the original.

"Anthony Adverse" is a distinctive advance in the field of modern motion picture production and story telling. It probably was a daring and risky story to experiment with as a picture. Undoubtedly there are a great many awaiting the outcome of that experiment. As produced it retains the full dramatic essence of the original. Smartly, it achieves all that might tend to cheapen its impressive power.

Sufficiently worthy of their talents the story is told with finish and conviction by Frederic March, Olivia De Havilland, Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains, Anita Louise, Gale Sondergaard and almost a score more accomplished players in minor character and atmospheric roles and will no doubt prove a big attraction for the balance of this week at the Elite.

Reduction in R'lway Fares For July 1st

WINNIPEG, Man.—With the advent of Canada's mid-summer public holiday, Dominion Day, which this year will be observed on Thursday, July 1, the Canadian National Railways will place in effect reduced rates, providing an opportunity for economical travel, according to an announcement made by R. ROCKEFELLER—an organizer. Before he was fifty, John D. Rockefeller, son of a country horse-doctor, had made himself the richest man in the world. He did it by seizing the opportunity offered by a new industry, oil. He was an organizer by instinct. He brought order and system into the production, refining and distribution of oil. He made so much money in a field where men failed, that his unsuccessful rivals accused him of almost every crime in the business calendar. He was the worst-hated man in America when he retired from business forty years ago.

When he died the other day at 97 he was perhaps the best-loved man in America. For in those forty years he had given away, for the benefit of humanity, almost all of his vast fortune. He endowed education, medical research and many other great movements for the betterment of the world. And the world's judgment of Mr. Rockefeller changed.

It is never wise to brand any man as a villain until time has had its chance to reveal his real character. Mr. Rockefeller was fortunate in living to see himself vindicated. MONEY—and men. I know and have known many of the world's wealthiest men. I do not think of many who valued money for its own sake. Most of the rich men I have known have felt that their wealth placed an obligation upon them to use their money for the service of their fellow-men. Andrew Carnegie said once that it was sinful for any man to die rich, and he gave his fortune away before he died. Henry Ford once told me that he bought out his stockholders because they wanted the Ford profits for themselves, in dividends. He felt they did not own the money; it belonged to the people who made and bought Ford cars, and he wanted to use the profits to pay the workers more and build cheaper and better cars.

The fact that a few men have used their great wealth selfishly does not seem to me to warrant denunciation of all rich men as enemies of the people. OPPORTUNITY—vision. Mr. Rockefeller, like all other men who have accumulated wealth by their own efforts, made money because he seized an opportunity which was open to anybody. Others have seen it but he was able to utilize it.

It is often said that there are no more opportunities. That is true for those who lack the vision to see and the courage to grasp the opportunity which is ready to their hands. I saw a motor-boat going up the St. Johns River the other day loaded with freight for inland Florida points. The big steamship companies have abandoned their lines up the river, because they did not pay. A bright young man with little capital but lots of energy started the new freight line and is getting rich.

Big fortunes are being made by men who saw the opportunity in such new things as radio, aviation and the chemical industries. Every day develops new opportunities for the able. CHARACTER—essential. I have seen many men fail, and in most instances I could trace the cause of their failure to the lack of one essential ingredient of success—character. All the ability, technical skill, "smarts" in the world will not bring enduring success unless those qualities are backed up by the most important of all—character.

I have often tried to define "character," but it is one of those things which everybody recognizes but few can explain in words. It means honesty, but more than mere legal honesty. It implies an inbred quality which makes it impossible for the man who has it to do a dishonest thing, to turn out a dishonest piece of work, to be "tricky" in any human relationship.

Mr. Rockefeller's greatest gift was his character. Every really successful man I know has that quality of character.

WORK—price of success. Nobody ever made important money without working for it. The only exception I can think of is those who discovered treasure hidden in the earth—and most of them have had to work hard before they found it.

It is certainly true that the men who operate great business enterprises work a lot harder than do most of their employees. The price of success is literally to have to live with one's business. Even when they appear to be playing, successful businessmen are thinking about their business, trying to figure out ways to turn chance contacts to good account. There never has been an easy road to riches. It makes me sore, sometimes, to hear men who drop everything when the clock strikes "quitting time" and give no thought to their work, until next morning, grouse because the "boss" has more than they have. He works for it.

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND THE CANADIAN INSURANCE COMPANY IN CANADA

SUMMER CARE OF THE INFANT AND CHILD

Outstanding points to be kept in mind in caring for your baby or young child during the hot summer months are—do not over-protect him, do not over-feed him, see that his food is kept fresh and exclude flies from your home.

In the extremely hot days the baby should have nothing on but a diaper. It is well during the very hot weather to give him two or three lukewarm sponge baths during the day in order to cool him down. Remember that the hot weather is very trying for the baby and small child.

During the very hot summer months the baby cannot properly digest and does not require as much food as during the rest of the year. Never force him with his food if he does not want it. However, it is most important that he be given lots of plain boiled water. We all realize how thirsty we become on hot days yet an infant needs many times more water for the size of his body than does the grown-up. Therefore always be careful to offer your baby lots of boiled water between his feedings. He cannot ask for it.

Recent work has shown that disease germs are found on the feet of flies. Be more careful to see that flies do not get on your infant's food. The apparently innocent travel of a fly over the nipple of your infant's bottle may give your baby cholera infantum, which frequently causes death. It is essential that all milk should be boiled for children under three years of age and food should be kept fresh and protected from flies. If diarrhoea or vomiting occurs, it is advised to stop all foods. Fluids such as water and orange juice solution administered frequently in small amounts are often helpful.

Remember during the summertime, in the hot weather, to see that your infant or young child is dressed in the coolest possible clothing. Only a diaper is necessary for the baby on very hot days. Sun suits are sufficient for the toddler.

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange, Director, Research Department, Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

From October last to April, 1937, wheat rose like a rocket from $1.10 to $1.50. From April to this June it fell like a rock from $1.50 to $1.14.

Why these great changes in price? The supply of wheat has been about as expected, practically unchanged. There have been no important changes in money currency, or in foreign exchange.

The simple answer is that the price fluctuations were caused solely by fluctuations in turn of that most important factor—the demand for the product.

From October to April certain European countries suddenly and unexpectedly most feverishly increased their demands for wheat. After April these extra demands began to fade away until today they hardly exist. Perhaps the waxing and waning of the "fear of war" was at the bottom of it all.

The situation reminds us forcibly that price is governed not alone by supply but equally well by demand. It is unfortunate, however, that while there are most excellent statistics about wheat supplies, and about money, to guide us, there are only at the best "intelligent guesses," and certainly no statistics, to help us to appraise demand.

Good judgment is all we can use. A good judgment, of course, is an exceedingly rare human attribute.

Following factors have tended to raise price:—Presence of black stem rust spores in winter wheat belt in northern Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. North Dakota—Rain badly needed in Canadian West—Argentine corn and linseed rapidly going into consumption abroad—Hungarian wheat estimates below 1936—Heavy rains in U.S. southwest cause widespread lodging.

Following factors have tended to lower price:—Decrease in Chinese wheat imports—Prospects of large U.S. wheat crop—Favorable development in U.S. spring wheat belt—Continental buyers anticipate largest U.S. crop in several years—Cuban pineapple crop large—Good apple crop indicated in Nova Scotia.

FARM WOMEN'S COURSE

A new course is being added to the July programme of short courses held at the Vermilion school of agriculture dealing with the practical end of agricultural work. The provincial department of agriculture is putting on such a course for four days beginning July 20th.

The work given will be made as interesting and practical as possible and will include talks on animal diseases, horse judging and feeding farm animals, forage and grain crops and weeds, a study of soils and fertilizers, practical blacksmithing, and, planting windbreaks and laying out the farmstead.

There will be ample time for discussion, and with a special impromptu concert, moving picture periods sport, and baseball games, this will be a real four-day outing of information, rest and recreation. The two courses will be held at the same time so that dad and mother may have this little holiday together.

For the course will include useful hints for the home such as sewing, cooking, laundrying, etc. One of the main ideas behind the movement is rest and recreation and last year 105 women attended the course the first day. Registration for the course will take place on the afternoon of July 19th and up to 6 p.m. The sessions will be over at 4 p.m. on Friday, July 24th.

Canadian Garden Service

Garden insect enemies are divided into two groups—those that eat holes in the foliage and those that suck out the juices. For the first group the usual method of control is spraying which penetrates. Often when both are present, a combination of poison and something that burns, gives the best results. Spraying or dusting when plants are damp are the usual methods of control. The damage from the biting insects is usually quite apparent, but the presence of the other kind is only shown at first by a wilting or withering of the foliage.

Fungus—When fungus attacks the plants, the foliage usually turns yellow or brown or white spots like mildew cover the leaves. Fungus is most common in warm, muggy weather. Spraying or dusting with specially finely ground sulphur is advised. Sulphur dust will also protect hollyhocks and phlox from rust, if applied when the disease first attacks. An ordinary tin can with the top perforated like a salt shaker makes a good duster.

Cut Worms and Weeds—Cut worms which eat through newly set out plants at the base of the stem, are poisoned by spreading sweetened bran mixed with Paris green or special mixtures about the plants. Where there are only a few plants to protect the same may be provided with paper collars.

There are now many chemical weed killers on the market, which have proved very successful in wiping out small plots and for cleaning up driveways and paths. For poison ivy, one application any time during the growing season is effective. Other weeds eliminated in the way are ox-eye daisy, bind weed, Canada thistle, and most of those things like dandelions which make so many lawns unsightly.

Push Growth Quickly—Tender vegetables are those which have been grown quickly. Especially with such things as radish, carrots and beets, is slow growth disastrous as the roots become woody and filled with objectionable fibre. But this rule also applies to everything used for salads. On this account experts advise pushing growth with frequent cultivation, which in addition to checking weeds also conserves moisture. Cultivation alone will often keep the vegetables going through a dry spell, but of course, a few pails of water or an hour or two with the hose at this time, will lend further aid. Fertilizer is another way of hurrying growth and therefore assuring vegetables of the highest quality.

Perennials from Seed—Most perennials may be grown from seed. Early in June is the best time to get started. Most of these should be started in a special nursery bed, except, perhaps such things as Oriental poppies which are rather difficult to transplant and should be sown where wanted permanently. Seed should be secured from a reliable firm. Start with seed, however, of the mixing of pollen by bees and insects is liable to produce poor results. Prepare a fine bed in some portion of the garden where there is good drainage and preferably a little shade in the middle of the day. The seed is sown in rows three or four inches apart. Thin out plants and provide a light protection of leaves or straw the first winter. Next spring transplant to permanent headquarters.

MORE FIRST AID

A small boy isn't worth a cent who doesn't try to climb the shade tree in the rear lawn once in awhile. Naturally he may fall in his effort to get some place that he doesn't belong. He may tumble from his tricycle in an unusual burst of speed. He cuts his scalp; it bleeds something terrible; he runs to mamma howling for first aid.Don't fear fracture of the skull from a trifling injury. Don't fear bleeding to death. Wash the wound with clean soap and warm water, using clean things always. DON'T POUR PEROXIDE IN A SCALP WOUND at any time. After washing as above, paint the wound with tincture of iodine, snuffs a little, but apply it freely. Dust freely with talcum powder and apply a loose bandage. Keep the wound dry until recovery.For a "crop" of chiggers, get at 'em early as possible, before they have bored deeply. First a scrubbing with good soap and water; dry, and apply the bug-icide, whatever you have. I use a mixture of carbolic acid, one dram, spirits of camphor, one ounce, menthol, twenty grains, and rose-water, enough to make four ounces. This can be dabbed over the lesions freely, allowing it to dry without wiping off.Sunburn is not to be sneezed at; it has been accompanied by big doses of the ultra-violet ray—a blessing in disguise. The oxide of zinc, a dram to the ounce of rose-water ointment will soothe the inflamed skin in time. Keep out of the strong sunlight until well.For a child's "stuffed toe," bruised, torn bleeding, soak the foot in water with a teaspoonful of carbolic acid—or formalin—to the pint.
Make the member clean. Then apply dressing or carbolic or boric vaseline and wrap comfortably.And, O, green apples! Colic! A big dose of milk of magnesia quick.
And who would object to fifteen drops of paregoric for the pain?

the health and productiveness of all farm animals from the effects of mineral deficiencies in their ration.
Mr. Muir said that until the soil's supply of the essential minerals could be built up, in phosphate particularly, by liberal and judicious fertilizing, the produce grown thereon would be deficient in minerals, and consequently the need for a mineral supplement to the feed was obvious. He warned against the purchase of these indiscriminately, advising the farmers to show preference for one with a reputation behind it, not high priced, yet containing in well-balanced proportions, and in assimilable forms all the minerals necessary.The regulations of the revised Feeding Stuffs Act, passed recently, contain provisions for the control of mineral supplements and their sale, by requiring from the manufacturer a guarantee of the contents, in percentages, and fixing certain limits of tolerance. In passing this legislation Canada has taken the lead, while the governments of other countries are still contemplating the step. The need for the measure is unquestionable, and it will curb the activities of unscrupulous vendors who have exploited the farmer by foisting upon him some worthless substance, attractive in name only.
The revised Feeding Stuffs Act will now be on a par with Canada's efficient Fertilizers Act, and both are administered by capable, astute officials of the Dominion Seed Branch. The Seeds Act is also about to be revamped, and it is hoped that the Agricultural Pests Control Act may soon be brought up-to-date.Professors G. B. Ruhnke, and J. H.
Edlin, in Manitoba, have called attention to the widespread mineral deficiency in herbage, resulting in serious impairment of the health and vigour of livestock. The feeding of a mineral supplement is recommended for cattle on pastures and should be one containing calcium and phosphorus in proportions of approximately two of the former to one of the latter, also a trace of copper, sulphur, iron and iodine. Mixed with an equal part of salt and placed in protected troughs, the mineral will be taken readily by the grazing animals.A proper mineral supplement aids not only in warding off diseases, such as rickets, goitre, anaemia, joint-ill of foals, hairlessness in young pigs and sterility, resulting from malnutrition, but enables the animal to make more profitable use of its food.A proper mineral supplement aids

5-Minute BiographiesAuthor of "How to Win Friends and Influence People."The Play That "Wasn't Worth Bothering About" Became the Greatest Drama Since HamletWhat would you say is the greatest stage play ever written? When leading critics of New York voted, by secret ballot, on the ten greatest plays of all time, the first honors went to Hamlet, written more than three hundred years ago. And they decided that the second greatest play ever written was not Macbeth nor King Lear nor The Merchant of Venice, but Rain. Yes, Rain, that tempestuous drama of sex and religion, fighting tooth and claw, in the South Seas—the play based on a short story by Somerset Maugham.Maugham has made $200,000 out of Rain. Yet he has not made her five minutes writing the play.
This is how it happened: He wrote a short story called Sadie Thompson. He didn't think much of the story—but one night, John Colton was staying at his house, and Colton wanted something to read til he fell asleep. Maugham handed him the proofs of Sadie Thompson.Colton was fascinated with the story. It thrilled him. He got out of bed and paced the floor, and in his imagination that night he saw it as a play—a drama that was destined to become immortal.The next morning he rushed to Somerset Maugham. "There's a great play in that story," he told him. "I've been thinking about it all night. Put me to sleep, eh? I didn't sleep a wink!"But Maugham wasn't impressed.
"A play?" he said in his crisp British voice. "Oh yes, possibly—a mor-bid sort of play. Might run six weeks. But it isn't really worth bothering about. Not really." And the play that he didn't think worth bothering about made him a fifth of a million dollars.When the play was finished, several producers turned it down. They were positive it would fail. He wanted Sam Harris accepted it. He wanted it for a young actress named Jeanne Eagles. But the agent for the play objected. He wanted someone who was better known.Finally Jeanne Eagles got the part and played Sadie Thompson with a passion and power that made her the sensation of Broadway. She played to packed houses for four hundred and fifteen rip-roaring performances.Somerset Maugham has written many distinguished books such as
Of Human Bondage, The Moon and Sixpence, and The Painted Veil; and he has written a score of successful dramas. But he didn't write his own most celebrated play.Some people call him a genius now, but he was a financial failure for eleven years after he started writing. Think of it! This man who was destined to make a million dollars as an author earned only five hundred dollars a year for the first eleven years after he turned out stories and novels. Sometimes he went hungry. He tried to get a job writing editorials on a salary basis, but he couldn't. "I had to keep on writing," Maugham told me, "because I just literally couldn't hold down a job."His friends told him he was a fool to keep on trying to write. He had already been graduated from medical college, so they said, and he ought to have taken to the doctor's coat and stethoscope. But he couldn't. That is about what happened to both Ripley and Maugham.Here is how Somerset Maugham got his first break. Somebody's play had failed in London, and the manager of the theatre was looking around for something to replace it.
He wasn't looking for a hit—just any old thing would do to fill in until he could get a real play into rehearsal. So he fished around in his desk, and pulled out a play by Somerset Maugham. Lady Frederick, it was called. He had had it in his desk for a year; he had read it; it wasn't worth a play. He knew that. But it might do for a few weeks. He put it on—and the miracle happened. Lady Frederick was a smash hit. It set all London talking. It tickled England as nothing had since the sparkling dialogue of Oscar Wilde.Immediately every theatre manager in London begged for a play by Somerset Maugham. He drew old manuscripts out of his desk and within a few weeks, three of his plays were playing to capacity houses.Royalties came pouring in. In golden flood. Publishers fell over each other bargaining for the work of this new genius. Society showered him with invitations; and after eleven years of oblivion, Somerset Maugham found himself the toast of Mayfair drawing rooms.Maugham told me that he never writes after one o'clock. He says his brain goes dead in the afternoon.
He writes in a penhouse on top of his Moorish villa on the French Riviera. He always smokes his pipe and reads philosophy for an hour before he starts to write.He told me that he isn't superstitious—nevertheless he has the sign of the Evil Eye stamped on the bindings of his books. He has the same curious design on the family plate. He has it on his stationery and on his playing cards.
He has it carved on the mantel above the fireplace, and he even has it carved above the entrance to his villa. But when I asked him if he really believed in it, he merely smiled.

CONTINUATION OF

There is much to be said in favor of the plan now being discussed in Washington, for throwing half of the burden of unemployment relief back upon the states and municipalities. The plea that the states cannot afford to carry the load falls down when it is realized that, whether Federal, state or local funds are used, they all come out of the pockets of the taxpayers—the same taxpayers.

The merit of the plan is that it would tend to much more careful scrutiny of relief roles by state and local officials charged with administering relief and raising half of the money locally. There would be much less extravagance and in all probability a great reduction in the number of persons found to be in actual need of relief.

This may not be the best possible solution, but it seems better than the present situation. It is certain that relief expenditures by the Federal government cannot continue forever as a permanent part of our national economic system. The best way to end them is for the states to reassess their rights and resume their duties toward their own dependents.

THE PROBLEM OF THE TRAILER

Now that summer is at hand, we may expect to see the highways crowded with homes on wheels, as half the world, more or less, goes "gyping." The trailer is here to stay. Enough Americans have been reporting their trailer experiences of last summer in the North and last winter in the South, to stir the enthusiasm of millions for this latest development in the art of vacation travelling.

There are social and economic problems in the use of the trailer, which call for study and solution. Eventually, special trailer camps or parks will be provided along the main tourist routes.

Many cities have adopted ordinances forbidding the parking of trailers inside the city limits. Others are making arrangements for special accommodations for trailer travelers. Everywhere the question of sanitation for trailer parks is being studied. Some ambitious plans provide for gas, water, electric and sewer connections for trailer camps, for which a fee of a few dollars a week will be charged.

There are many other unsolved questions about trailers, among them that of highway safety. Only experience can bring the answers to all of these problems. The one thing which seems to be certain is that the trailer home on wheels is here to stay.

Gasoline retails at about 60 cents a gallon in Bolivia.

$75 per month was suggested during the discussion.

Accounts amounting to $60.00 presented by the Mayor and Councilors Link and Lashmore were placed before Council by the finance minister for approval, and it was explained that this expense was caused by two emergency trips to Edmonton to interview the premier regarding the gas franchise. Coun. Welch thought that although the expense was fully justified it was not the correct procedure to have councilors making trips without due authority beforehand and Coun. Link felt that if any objection to the account in his behalf was raised he would rather withdraw it. However, it was agreed that the bills be presented as part of the finance routine of the regular finance meeting and Coun. Clerk was satisfied so to do.

Approval was given to Coun. Lashmore's idea that if thought advisable on July first writing to the state of the Main street he will have the fire ladders out to "lay the dust" and at the same time make a test of the fire system.

Regarding work at the cemetery, Coun. Billing mentioned that the day on the open land there had been cut, and he was planning to place a man there for a short while to cut weeds, trim up plots and other necessary work. All of which was agreed to.

Being asked regarding the presentation of a bylaw instituting a curfew in town for some of the younger generation (who are and have been creating a nuisance) Coun. Clerk stated that such was not yet prepared as he wished to obtain the Council's wishes as to age, number and so forth. A large number of suggestions were made—some of the Council went back into their memory for a long way to give early life experiences—and finally it was decided to have the solicitor draw up a curfew bylaw which will set for all children up to and including fourteen years of age (unless accompanied by parents or guardians) must be off the streets during the months of July and August not later than ten o'clock p.m. and no later than 9:30 p.m. during the other ten months of the year. Penalty for disregard of the bylaw was set at a maximum of $10.00, with the parents or guardians of the delinquents being held responsible.

And after such a strenuous evening when at times even our cool and phlegmatic Mayor appeared to get warm under the collar (from the terrible heat, of course) Council adjourned.

WM. TREFFRY

Still another old-timer of the neighborhood passed away on Sunday night in the person of Mr. Wm. Treffry, who for very many years was an employee of the National Park staff.

The deceased had been on the sick list for some time, and although he had sought relief from cancer for a long time, nothing availed and he passed on at the age of 56 years at his home near Czar.

He leaves his wife and three sons and two daughters to mourn his decease.

Interment will be made in Wainwright cemetery this (Wednesday) afternoon.

Rains Are Surely
Helping Returns

The Bank of Montreal regular crop report states that wheat seeding is generally finished and the seeding of coarse grains is nearing completion in the Prairie Provinces. The total acreage seeded will probably be slightly less than last year. Beneficial rains have been received in most districts during the past ten days, and apart from southern and western Saskatchewan and a part of southeastern Alberta, crop conditions on the whole are satisfactory for the present. In Quebec and Ontario frequent rains have retarded seeding and planting, but these are now well advanced under good growing conditions. In the Maritime Provinces conditions have been very favourable following wet, cool weather in May. In British Columbia, while the season is two weeks later than usual, crops are making rapid growth and conditions generally are satisfactory.

Where "G.E." weather has prevented rapid growth, but crops generally are ahead of last year. Substantial general rains during the last fortnight have considerably improved conditions and checked soil drifting, which had become serious in some cases. Present rains are essential owing to sub-soil moisture deficiency. Pastures are progressing favourably. Sugar beets are good and thinning has commenced. Saskatchewan.—The growth of wheat and other grains is satisfactory in districts where moisture conditions are good. While some moisture has fallen in all areas, rainfall in the south central and south-western sections has been scanty, and heavy rains are urgently required to offset lack of sub-soil moisture. Soil drifting has caused some damage. Manitoba.—Crop conditions are satisfactory at present throughout the Province. Generous rains have occurred and, with ample moisture, early sown grain is showing vigorous growth and a thick stand. Pastures are good.

Low Cost Fuels DO THEIR DUTY

IN THIS ENGINE'S IDEAL "CLIMATE"

All that the Spark-Ignition "Caterpillar" Tractor's engine asks, to quickly prepare an ideal "tractor fuel" climate, is for you to start on gasoline—and mount the deep-cushioned seat.

Instantly the highly-effective, triple-action heat-conditioning system gets busy. The super-heater spots heat from all 4 cylinders on the intake manifold—the big responsive thermostat regulates water circulation for a speedy warm-up.

As you drive along, you watch the convenient temperature indicator reach 190 degrees—then just reach over and shift the handy control valve lever to switch from gasoline to tractor fuel. Correct operating temperature is accurately held—to assure proper vaporization, clean combustion and alert performance on low-cost, low-volatility fuels.

The Twenty-Two and the new model Thirty are built to operate on low-cost tractor fuels (or gasoline is you prefer)—and to cut your fuel costs 50 per cent. to 45 per cent. below gasoline to do the same work.

AMONG THE OLD-TIMERS

"REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS"

TEN YEARS AGO

Mrs. W. Dallas left last week for a two or three months' holiday with relatives in the Old Country.

Mr. Tom Hill was taken to Edmonton to undergo an operation.

A new Pontiac coach was delivered to Edgerton last week; Mr. Otto Dempsey being the proud owner.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hackett have moved into the Armstrong cottage on Third avenue.

After completing her studies in the States, Miss Mary Flah returned this week to her parental home.

Mrs. J. Gerow left on Monday to spend a holiday with friends and relatives in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. R. Watson of Edgerton purchased a Pontiac coach from the Dupre garage during the past week.

Speaking of our grain, rivals will have to go some. Mr. Ross Valieu reports that he has a stand of fall rye, six feet ten inches high and also that his spring wheat is a whole yard stick high.

Mrs. Geo. Morton left to visit her daughters in the States.

Mr. Lewis Alexander has been taken as the new junior in the Bank of Montreal.

SYDENHAM

Miss M. Sinclair spent the week-end with her parents at Killam.

Mrs. B. F. Beaulieu and her two sons were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. Croesus.

An agent was in the district on Monday soliciting orders for papers and magazines.

Miss Georgina McKay, spent the week-end with Eileen and Donnie, who are residing on the farm for a few weeks.

Mrs. J. Ruste was visiting with friends in Irma on Sunday.

Mr. Ross Moore and Mr. Ted Goddard have been busy during the past week fixing up an old tractor on the farm of Mr. H. Peterson, following which they removed it to Hope Valley.

The men are busy in this district putting in their time on their road work.

Mrs. F. Seabrook motored to Loughheed on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daugherty to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Routledge.

Mr. J. Ruste returned to his home on Monday, after being called to the jury in Edmonton.

Mr. T. Seale from Haverhill, Mass., was visiting with his sister Mrs. A. Kinghorn later leaving for Vancouver, Seattle, and other parts.

Farmers are reminded to bring in their wool to town next week for the car which will be loading on Friday next.

It is pleasing to report that Mr. D. Wallace is reported as getting along nicely, although Mrs. Wallace is still staying with him in his convalescence.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Mr. Alex Murray passed away on June 19th at the home of his son John at the age of 72 years.

Mr. Donald McDougall was seriously injured while he was leading a cow to pasture. The animal kicked him in the forehead and rendered him unconscious for several hours. A number of stitches were required in the wound.

Miss Mabel Pecknold of Green-shields has accepted a position in the Merchant's bank in town.

Following a lengthy illness, Mrs. Evariste Denoncourt died at the age of 58 years. She had been a resident of the Gilt Edge district for the past ten years.

Mr. A. A. Thorsen of Viking has accepted a position with the Wainwright Star.

A pleasant time was spent at Heath last week, when Miss Esther Cummings was feted on her birthday.

HEATH

On Monday evening, June 14th, Miss Gladys Mockford, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mockford of Heath and John Smith, second son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Smith of Heath, were united in marriage at Wainwright Anglican church by the Rev. Rickard. Relatives were present at the ceremony. The young couple will reside on the groom's farm north of Heath.

A meeting of St. Patrick's W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Morton Herbert on Thursday. The details for a garden party on July 2nd were discussed.

Miss Mary Aitkens spent the week end with Miss Violet Smith.

FOX COMEDY IS

DIFFERENT PICTURE

As sheer non-sensational farce, "Sing, Baby, Sing" is so different from any recent or current comedy picture that possibility of comparison is precluded. A merry, mad film, it is one round of foolishness, and as a basis for a succession of interludes and specialties.

There's no rhyme or reason to all that happens. Laugh provocation is the film's sole objective and everything is done with the utmost good taste to establish "Sing, Baby, Sing" as the kind of attraction one can safely endorse as one of the funniest pictures of the season.

At the Elite first three days of next week.

Home Loans are Being Freely Used

Every family can find good use for a second living room. With the popularity of home entertainment, which has grown considerably in recent years, many home owners are turning any possible space into another gathering place for the family.

Basement attics, large halls or unused guest rooms are being converted to practical use. Funds for modernization of interiors may now be obtained under the generous terms of the Home Improvement Plan.

Much has been said and written about the type of apartment known as a recreation room for basement or attic, but if this seems too frivolous for your family's taste there is no reason why an ordinary living room cannot be created in either of these places. The market is flooded with materials with which rooms of this type may be easily constructed.

One home-owner whose family's inclinations ran to bridge, monopoly and other such games, built a living room in a corner of the basement of his home. It was completely snuff off from the furnace and could be reached directly from the outside or from the kitchen stairs.

Fire-resistant composition board was used for the walls and ceiling, completely hiding pipes and other cellar equipment. A composition covering was also laid over the basement cement floor and a fireplace was built, with bookcases on either side. The cellar windows, high up in the walls, were finished in an attractive manner. The entire house was air-conditioned.

Furnishings were bought with the family's own funds and were in keeping with the character of the room. A large table held a lamp and magazines, and offered space for a game of solitaire or mother's new dress patterns.

Comfortable chairs with reading lamps and convenient tables with attractive accessories completed the room's furnishings.

The Legion Notice Board

The Provincial Convention was a distinct success and according to present reports the northern parts of the province are to get equal treatment with the southern in that provincial conventions will in future be held alternately in Edmonton and Calgary. This seems fair enough and should help the northern branches considerably without in any way detracting from the importance of the influential and populous southern branches.

As soon as a satisfactory date can be arranged a general meeting will be held at which President Graham will present a full report of the convention. It is hoped that Com. McLaren, President of the Edmonton Branch, and Com. Hecker, Zone Representative for this district will be present at this meeting and that a very full attendance will result.

Gov't Extra Session Prorogued Thursday

After an intensive drive to clean up business, the provincial government was prorogued on Thursday night last at a late hour. The estimates for the fiscal year amounting to something over $22,000,000.00 were ratified, and fourteen further bills were passed and given assent by the Hon. Governor.

The last business of the house before adjourning was the setting up of a royal commission to make full enquiry into the highway costs of the province—particularly with regard to the Edmonton-Wainwright new road.

Shortly after 11 p.m. Attorney-General Huggill escorted His Honor Lieut.-Gov. J. C. Bowen into the legislative chamber and in closing the session His Honor said: "In bringing to a conclusion this third session of the eighth legislative assembly, I desire to express my appreciation of the earnest and thorough manner in which you have applied yourselves to your public duties."

"It is with deep regret that I refer to the death of George H. Van Allen K.C., a member of this assembly, which occurred during the present session; by his death the assembly loses a prominent member, a bar an accomplished lawyer, and as the kind of an able, conscientious and public-spirited servant."

"A number of important measures have come before you for decision. I have noted with much satisfaction the careful attention you have given to all of these, keeping steadily in mind the promotion of the welfare of our province."

"I thank you for the provision you have made to meet the needs of the public service. The sums of money you have thus provided will be expended by my ministers in accordance with the principles of efficient and economic administration."

"In relieving you from your duties and declaring the assembly prorogued, I pray that under Divine Providence our province will soon advance to the attainment of the fullest measure of prosperity and happiness for all the people."

It was the first occasion on which His Honor had prorogued his legislature as his appointment was made after the session had met.

Bills to which assent was given on Thursday by His Honor, were as follows, a large number having been assented to earlier in the session:

Act to amend the Notary Public Act; act to amend the Municipal District Act; act to amend the Tax Recovery Act; act to amend the Public Health Act; act to amend the Agricultural Pests Act; act to amend the Feeder Associations Guarantee Act; act to enable the Town of Lacombe and the Municipal District of Crown No. 369 to enter into an agreement for the provision of Hospital Facilities; an act respecting the Magrath Irrigation District; act respecting Garagemen's Liens; act to further amend the Public Utilities Act; act to amend the Prosperity Certificates Act; act respecting Seasonal Indemnities; act in respect of the Fourth Session of the Eighth Legislative Assembly; act to amend the Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare, act to further amend the School Act, 1931.

AND IT'S STILL TRUE!
Governor Francis of Missouri recently paid the following worth while tribute to newspapers:

"Each year the local newspaper gives away from $600 to $1000 in free lines to the community in which it is located. The editor in proportion to his means, does more for his own town than any other ten men, and in all fairness he ought to be supported, not because you like him, or admire his writings, or for any other subtle motive but because the local newspaper is the best investment a community can make. Today the editors of the local newspapers do the most for the least money of any people."—Bainbridge Tribune.

MORTGAGE LOANS

THousands of thousands of Canadian farms and homes benefit from first mortgage loans made possible by the accumulated savings of Life Insurance policyholders.

For every borrower, there are six thrifty people who supply the necessary funds.

This fact affords a striking illustration of the "double duty" performed by Life Insurance dollars. Not only do they ensure financial security for the men, women and children of Canada, but they also help to build and finance their farms and homes.

Life Insurance companies exercise the greatest care in the selection of properties upon which mortgage loans are made. To safeguard the savings of policyholders, security of principal and interest is and must always be the first consideration.

Nikolas Nolescu, a departmental silk manager at Oxtons, a big London silk emporium, is discovered by Phyllis Varley, first assistant in the Chinese Silk Department, lying dead, his body wrapped in a roll of Chinese silk beneath her counter.

Superintendent James Beck, of Scotland Yard, finds that Nolescu has been strangled and later discovers that the man has been particularly interested in Suchow silk.

Professor Karmen, at the British Museum, tells Beck that he had met the man in China, where he found him inquiring the whereabouts of Tiao Li, a silk weaver of Suchow. The Professor tells the Superintendent that it is believed that Tiao Li has been tortured and since dead because he knew the secret of the whereabouts of "The Five Eyes of Medley chus," a jewel which has been pilaged from a temple in the mountains and which is sought by members of the Tong, a Chinese secret society. Beck forms the opinion that the weaver committed the crime to the silk he was weaving at the time he became aware that the Tong were on his heels.

Beck goes out that night to dine with Peter Oxtan, managing director of the silk store and after he has left Oxtan receives a visit from a Tartar who threatens evil to his daughter unless he instructs the police to check their vigil at the store.

(Now Read On)

"Then it's not so bad after all. He's a smart young fellow, Slater. It would be something of a feather in his cap if he pulled it off under the noses of Scotland Yard. What would you say about that Superintendent?"

The Superintendent grimaced. He felt that Oxtan was now laughing at him and such conduct was unforgivable.

"I may as well tell you, Mr. Oxtan. I asked Slater to keep an eye on the place and he admitted he could. That was because, at your request, I had no men on duty. I like young Slater. He's a good type of kid, but all the same I'm worried about him. If he'd only told me what the chus was he was following I'd be feeling a whole heap happier at this moment. You see, Mr. Oxtan, the amateur detective can do innumerable harm to a case of this kind unless he's very, very careful. He might get himself into serious trouble, too. My own view is that we are dealing with a gang of highly dangerous fanatics who are waiting to get hold of some information by way of Suchow silk you have in this store. They are that type of fanatic that stops at nothing to get what they want. We've had one murder already, and I don't mind admitting that I'm uneasy. However, I can't see what more we can do at the moment, but whether you like it or not Mr. Oxtan, my men are now on duty."

"Ah, good-morning, Mr. Beck, allow me to introduce an old friend of mine, Professor Kan Pu, who has just arrived from London. He is to see him and he hurried to his room."

The Professor was not alone. He was accompanied by a tall, gaunt-looking Chinaman.

"And what can I do for the two professors?" questioned the Superintendent with a smile.

Professor Karmen answered. "You remember, Superintendent, our little talk the other day about The Five Eyes of Medley chus. Well, Professor Kan Pu is the head of the temple sect who are the rightful owners of the jewel, and it has come to the Professor's knowledge that the responsible counter-influences are at work in London at this very moment in a desperate effort to obtain possession of the secret."

"He tells me that the head of the organization at present operating—and the one responsible for the murder of Nolescu—is none other than the great bandit Sen Yat Soh, whose name alone is sufficient to strike terror into the hearts of his opponents. He tells me also, that Nolescu was employed by the Golden Eagle Tong, rivals of Sen Yat Soh, and that having investigated at first hand the assassination of Lao Ti, the silk weaver of Suchow, he is convinced that on a certain roll of Suchow silk, which was consigned recently to London, the secret has been woven in the form of a trademark to escape detection."

Professor Kan Pu nodded his head in agreement as his friend finished his narrative.

"And what am I expected to do about it, Professor?" asked Beck, helplessly. "It's quite the most amazing thing I've ever encountered."

Professor Karmen had little idea what he ought to suggest. He had been confident that, having substantiated their early theory concerning the death of Nikolas Nolescu, the Superintendent would immediately put his official machinery into motion to secure the arrest of Sen Yat Soh and his gang.

"I thought it might not be so difficult now that we are certain," he suggested lamely.

The Superintendent laughed. "It wouldn't be difficult if we knew what we were about. All I can tell you is that a large quantity of Suchow silk was stolen last night from Oxtan's store, and, at the moment, we have no inkling who stole it and where it might be."

"But this is terrible," wailed Professor Kan Pu. "I quite delightful English. 'Already Sen Yat Soh may have found the answer.'"

"It would be a great help if I knew where to find this mysterious gentleman," suggested Beck mildly. The two professors looked at one another anxiously.

"That's just what we don't know," Professor Karmen told him. "We thought that Scotland Yard..."

"Could find a needle in a haystack," supplied the Superintendent. "According to my information," he went on, opening a folder and taking from it a foolscap document, "no Chinese alien of that name is known to us. All I can suggest is that either he is registered under another name or else he came to London uninvited. You appreciate my difficulty."

in and around the store. They won't be in anyone's way. They're good fellows who know their respective jobs. Two of them will remain behind here tonight when the store closes. You need not worry about them; they will be as unobtrusive as shadows. There will be others outside the store. I'm doing this purely as a precautionary measure. I can't anticipate that there will be any further breakings-in. I don't imagine that any of our members of your staff need fear abduction. My only regret is that it's rather like closing the stable doors after the horse has entered away. I'm going up here to the Yard. If Slater turns back, let me know immediately. And you might do gently with him, remembering that I'm responsible for his absence here this morning."

Peter Oxtan passed a hand across his eyes and nodded.

When Beck returned to his office he was surprised to hear that Professor Karmen was waiting to see him and he hurried to his room.

The Professor was not alone. He was accompanied by a tall, gaunt-looking Chinaman.

gentlemen?"

Professor Karmen certainly appreciated it. Until Sen Yat Soh was given an address he must remain the over-elusive personality that he was throughout the Far East. Neither was it a comforting thought to Professor Kan Pu. His friend, Professor Karmen had given him to understand that Scotland Yard could assuredly have put their fingers on the fellow immediately they knew who they were looking for.

"If it will be of any help to you," Beck suggested, "I can arrange for both of you to inspect warehouse stock of Suchow silk Oxtan's may still have, and of course I'll get our alien officers on the hunt immediately but they're not going to thank me for doing that believe me."

For a moment the girl's heart leapt with hope. "But who is it?" she asked, excitedly.

"I have yet to learn his name. He is a young man from Oxtan's. Why he is here, I know not, but as you know I have ways of making tongues loosen."

"You mean Mr. Slater. But that's wonderful," cried Phyllis. "You say he is here?"

Sen Yat Soh watched the girl, an evil leer on his lips. He nodded. "Yes, that's the young gentleman, he's here, and I want you to tell me everything you know about him and particularly whether he knows anything about Chinese silk."

Phyllis was on her guard immediately. She had no idea how Philip had found the house. But her next thought was not so hopeful. Perhaps Philip had been brought here as she and Miss Lennard had been.

"I really don't know very much about him," she began; "that is, if it really is Mr. Slater. He's on the office staff but he comes into the shop occasionally otherwise I would know nothing about him at all."

"You lie!" exclaimed Sen Yat Soh. "You and he are lovers. Your eyes speak more truly than your tongue. And being lovers you will have secrets. They are secrets I must know. I must know them before tomorrow sundown. You will speak!"

Phyllis felt herself trembling. What could she tell him but the truth. She knew nothing about this silk mystery that he had prated about since she had brought her to the house. She couldn't understand a word of it and she doubted very much whether Philip knew, either.

"I don't know any more than what I have already told you," she insisted.

"Yet you lied to me about that silk," he sneered. "You said it had been bought by Miss Lennard. I now know that she did not purchase any silk. What have you to say to that?"

"I have nothing to say except that you drove me to it," she said hoarsely. "I gave you the first name and address that came to my head. I didn't know that it would prove to be the name and address of an actual person."

"Very well. You will go back to your room and see if Miss Lennard is well. I shall not need her again for a little while and I imagine she will be feeling a little distressed after her electric tonic."

Ling Foo arrived in that mysterious way he always did arrive and conducted her from the room.

"YOU LIE!"

Philip heard the grating of a key in the lock. A yellow light glowed through the tiny room. Ling Foo stood in the doorway.

"You will come with me, and you will make no attempts to be violent. If you are you will be placed in irons, uncomfortable irons, Mr. Slater. Irons that are connected with minious fashion he was frog-marched from the room, along the landing and bundled into another room to tally clerk. A key snapped in the lock and he found himself alone.

Ling Foo now bustled himself with restoring Brenda Lennard to consciousness. He did it instinctively by dashing cold water into the woman's face. Miss Lennard blinked, and when her eyes rested on Ling Foo's face she gave a little scream and covered back against that horrible torture-impregnated mattress.

"It is well, Miss Lennard," Ling Foo told her politely. "When you are well enough I shall carry you to your room."

Brenda Lennard shuddered again. "No thank you," she said grimly. "I'll walk."

Phyllis Varley, meanwhile, had been summoned before Sen Yat Soh. The girl felt anything but cheerful. She had heard Brenda Lennard's screams and knew that her case next. It was horrible, revolting.

"Sit down, Miss Varley," said Sen Yat Soh, indicating a chair. "I am in a difficulty. We have a visitor and I want you to tell me something about him to me. The truth, you understand."

For a moment the girl's heart leapt with hope. "But who is it?" she asked, excitedly.

"Sit down, Miss Varley," said Sen Yat Soh, indicating a chair. "I am in a difficulty. We have a visitor and I want you to tell me something about him to me. The truth, you understand."

For a moment the girl's heart leapt with hope. "But who is it?" she asked, excitedly.

"I have yet to learn his name. He is a young man from Oxtan's. Why he is here, I know not, but as you know I have ways of making tongues loosen."

minious fashion he was frog-marched from the room, along the landing and bundled into another room to tally clerk. A key snapped in the lock and he found himself alone.

Ling Foo now bustled himself with restoring Brenda Lennard to consciousness. He did it instinctively by dashing cold water into the woman's face. Miss Lennard blinked, and when her eyes rested on Ling Foo's face she gave a little scream and covered back against that horrible torture-impregnated mattress.

"It is well, Miss Lennard," Ling Foo told her politely. "When you are well enough I shall carry you to your room."

Brenda Lennard shuddered again. "No thank you," she said grimly. "I'll walk."

Phyllis Varley, meanwhile, had been summoned before Sen Yat Soh. The girl felt anything but cheerful. She had heard Brenda Lennard's screams and knew that her case next. It was horrible, revolting.

"Sit down, Miss Varley," said Sen Yat Soh, indicating a chair. "I am in a difficulty. We have a visitor and I want you to tell me something about him to me. The truth, you understand."

For a moment the girl's heart leapt with hope. "But who is it?" she asked, excitedly.

"I have yet to learn his name. He is a young man from Oxtan's. Why he is here, I know not, but as you know I have ways of making tongues loosen."

"You mean Mr. Slater. But that's wonderful," cried Phyllis. "You say he is here?"

Sen Yat Soh watched the girl, an evil leer on his lips. He nodded. "Yes, that's the young gentleman, he's here, and I want you to tell me everything you know about him and particularly whether he knows anything about Chinese silk."

Phyllis was on her guard immediately. She had no idea how Philip had found the house. But her next thought was not so hopeful. Perhaps Philip had been brought here as she and Miss Lennard had been.

"I really don't know very much about him," she began; "that is, if it really is Mr. Slater. He's on the office staff but he comes into the shop occasionally otherwise I would know nothing about him at all."

"You lie!" exclaimed Sen Yat Soh. "You and he are lovers. Your eyes speak more truly than your tongue. And being lovers you will have secrets. They are secrets I must know. I must know them before tomorrow sundown. You will speak!"

Phyllis felt herself trembling. What could she tell him but the truth. She knew nothing about this silk mystery that he had prated about since she had brought her to the house. She couldn't understand a word of it and she doubted very much whether Philip knew, either.

"I don't know any more than what I have already told you," she insisted.

"Yet you lied to me about that silk," he sneered. "You said it had been bought by Miss Lennard. I now know that she did not purchase any silk. What have you to say to that?"

"I have nothing to say except that you drove me to it," she said hoarsely. "I gave you the first name and address that came to my head. I didn't know that it would prove to be the name and address of an actual person."

"Very well. You will go back to your room and see if Miss Lennard is well. I shall not need her again for a little while and I imagine she will be feeling a little distressed after her electric tonic."

Ling Foo arrived in that mysterious way he always did arrive and conducted her from the room.

"YOU LIE!"

Philip heard the grating of a key in the lock. A yellow light glowed through the tiny room. Ling Foo stood in the doorway.

"You will come with me, and you will make no attempts to be violent. If you are you will be placed in irons, uncomfortable irons, Mr. Slater. Irons that are connected with

SWEETHEART DRINKS
"Tinkle of mandolins, a porch hammock and discreet shadows may satisfy the romantic longings of the young for the first part of the evening. But come 10 o'clock, even romance needs refreshments! Keep a supply of chocolate syrup in the refrigerator, a well-filled cookie jar, and leave the young people to forage for themselves. Any blushing maiden who serves either of these chocolate drinks is clearly destined to become the most popular hostess on the block."

2 tablespoons Chocolate Syrup
3 tablespoons chocolate ice cream

Add milk slowly to syrup stirring constantly. Beat or shake well. Pour into tall glass. Add ice cream. Serves 1.

Chocolate Iceberg
1 cup chilled milk.
2 tablespoons Chocolate Syrup
3 tablespoons vanilla ice cream

Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Beat or shake well. Pour into tall glass. Add ice cream and serve at once. Serves 1.

Chocolate Syrup
(Base for chocolate drinks)
5 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 cup sugar

2½ cup hot water
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
Melt chocolate over hot water; cool to lukewarm. Add sugar to water, stirring until sugar is dissolved; cool to lukewarm. Add syrup to egg yolks, about one-fourth at a time, beating well after each addition; add chocolate in the same way. Then continue beating mixture.

Turn into jar, cover tightly, and place in refrigerator. Syrup can be kept for several days. Use 2 tablespoons chocolate syrup for 1 cup

Philip decided that, after his previous experience, the fellow probably meant everything he said and he realized that if he was able to get free of the house again he must not be impeded with irons, so he preceded Ling Foo along the passage and down the staircase.

Sen Yat Soh was waiting to receive them. There was a note of impatience in his almost eyes.

"So, Mr. Slater, you are from Oxtan. Employed in the office. Doubtless you know something about the consignments of Suchow silk that have arrived in London in the past few weeks. Is that not so?"

Philip felt that the Chinaman had been possessed of accurate information in the shortest possible time, since he had appeared not to know who he was less than an hour ago.

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW IN MACHINES

On Tuesday, June 29th, the Automatic Harvester Co. of Calgary, in conjunction with their local agent, Frank W. Fish, will give a free motion picture show at the L.O.O.F. hall, of their new harvesting machines, the Gilbert automatic harvester and the Gilbert side-delivery feeder, for all makes and sizes of threshers. The pictures will also include the Gilbert straw spreader.

The Gilbert harvester stacker is not an experiment for the farmer, but a proven success in all climatic conditions. Once the grain is in the stack, rain, snow or wind may come and the farmer may rest assured that worries of a spoiled crop are over.

Stacks of grain in the 1935 crop were left out all winter and covered with snow, and the spring rains poured their dangers on these stacks and when they were threshed in June, 1936, they produced the same quality and grade of wheat as was threshed in the fall of 1935. The feed value of the straw is also increased by 50 per cent. after going through the natural sweat in the stack. There is no stacking, no twine bill, and the threshing can be done for much less than the old binding method. It has been proven that it is real economy to take the threshing to the grain instead of the grain to the machine.

Mr. L. T. Torgerson, of Wainwright, purchased one of these machines last year and was very favorably impressed with the saving it made on his 500 acres which was cut entirely with this method.

All are invited to see these pictures and get the information that the representative of the manufacturer can give. This show is for instruction, so farmers should save the date, June 29th, (Tuesday next) and be at the L.O.O.F. hall in town.

MODERN WOMEN

CHARL ORMOND
WILLIAMS

Miss Grace Abbott, former head of the Children's Bureau in the Department of Labor at Washington, D.C., has been named by the National Conference for Clarifying the Constitution by Amendment as chairman of a committee of twenty-eight. Her committee, which includes eminent chambers, labor, educators and others, will examine the proposed constitutional amendment dealing with Federal power to legislate for better working and living conditions in agriculture and industry. Miss Abbott is professor of public welfare at the University of Chicago.

In Italy women wearing uniforms officially supervise markets and give advice about farm produce. There is an organization of 800,000 rural women in the Fascist country which hold exhibitions from time to time. Women artists are now being organized and Antonietta Paoli Pagliani is heading them for the women's artists' international exhibition to be held in Paris this year.

A new magazine called the "Bachelor" is being edited by a woman Miss Fanchon Devore.

The Associated Press predicts an increasing demand for women photographers to cover feature assignments. This worldwide service has taken on a young woman, Miss Mary Morris, who is said to be the first of her sex to do photographic work regularly for a news service as a staff member. Heretofore, men have covered practically all this type of photography. Miss Morris who is young, a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College, New York, was an ardent camera fan while in college and took a course in photography, specializing in lighting and composition. She will not cover news of sports, but will do feature work, which is more creative.

Denmark is progressing with the other countries of the world in granting recognition to its women. Mrs. Alia Saabye is the first woman to be appointed head of the department of the State Experimental Institute and Dr. Marie Anderson is the first woman head of Vested Hospital.

THE STATESMANSHIP OF LIFE INSURANCE

Mr. Gratian O'Leary, editor of the Ottawa Journal, at the annual meeting of Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association says that from the standpoint of the individual, life insurance is the finest, wisest and safest investment that a man can make. It gives him security, a greater self-respect, a higher reserve of character. It confers upon him what the world most needs today—a sense of individual human responsibility. In those black winter years when fortunes and savings were swept away, life insurance was the one sheet anchor that held—for hundreds of thousands of families.

I am in favor of it because it gives a man an estate; because it purchases security, increases confidence, removes fear, and establishes credit. More than that, and from a national standpoint, it is a check and balance against periods of inflated prosperity and of extreme depression.

But I am in favor of life insurance for one other reason—to my mind the greatest reason of all. I am in favor of it because it is one of the greatest factors in our national life today in the creation of a sense of individual responsibility. That, to my mind—the sense of responsibility in the individual himself—is one of the great needs of our times.

The old idea of thrift, the old notion of our fathers that a man must make his own way, that he was responsible for himself and for his family, that he must depend upon his own energy, his own foresight and his own courage—these things have begun to give way to a leaning towards paternalism, toward a tendency to have the state or the government do for us what we should be prepared to do for ourselves.

That is why we are turning to such things as old age pensions, to state control of this and that; that is why we have talk of state old age insurance, talk of scores of other things, the responsibility for which, in an individualistic society, should fall upon the individual, and upon no one else.

Life insurance does make for the personal responsibility of the individual. It makes for self-dependence, independence, self-respect and self-reliance. It gives to the individual a stake in the community, a stake in his own country; and because it does this, it constitutes itself one of the greatest of all bulwarks against communism, socialism and all otherisms.

I want to stress what life insurance means for the state. Last year in 1936, life insurance companies paid out to Canadians in death claims, matrilities, annuities, dividends and other benefits the colossal sum of $150,000,000. Add that sum to the payments made through the years of depression, and we have the tremendous fact of $1,135,000,000 paid out in Canada by life insurance companies since 1929; this taking no account of millions in loans secured by policyholders during periods of stress.

We hear much of what governments have done to fight the depression, to tide our people over difficulty; to steady the national morale. Yet not all that our Governments—national, provincial, municipal—have paid out in relief equals, or begins to equal, the tremendous sums paid out by our life insurance companies. What it meant, and at this time to the national well-being, to the encouragement and steadying of the national heart, can hardly be overestimated. In a word, life insurance, as an institution, has stood through these years as one of the mightiest factors for good in our national life; a pillar of the state; a buttress of capitalist civilization; a challenge in itself to all enemies of individualism.

MEN GET MARRIED, TOO!

("Old Bill" in Dunville Chronicle)
John Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones of Pleasant Villa, became the bridegroom of Miss Elizabeth Smith at high noon today. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom's parents, and a full house was counted present. Mr. Jones was attended by Mr. H. Brown as groomsmen.

As the groom approached the altar he was the cynosure of all eyes. Blushing prettily he replied to the questions of the officiating clergyman in low but firm tones. He was charmingly clad in a three-piece suit consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat of dark material was draped about the shoulders and gracefully gathered under the arms. A pretty story was current among the wedding guests that the coat was the same worn by his father and grandfather on their wedding days. Mr. Jones does not deny the truth of this sentimental touch. The vest was sleeveless and met in front, being gracefully fashioned with pockets, and at the back held together with strap and buckle. Conspicuous on the front of the vest was the groom's favorite piece of jewelry, a fraternity pin, and from the upper left-hand pocket was suspended a large Inger-

NEWS & VIEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

Mr. A. W. Hole who was formerly connected with the Gold Standard refinery in town, was in town with his son, visiting friends for a few days. We understand they now operate a refinery at Cutbank, Montana.

Several farmers and ranchers from the south country formed a cavalcade last week through town looking for pasture and feed for winter stock. One remarked that it had not rained in his home district for over a year, and in many places this year the seed did not even germinate.

We are informed that the water well at the Battleville site has been deepened and that sufficient is now being obtained for two shifts of drillers, and that work there is proceeding.

Don't forget to have your car fully insured before you leave on that trip. Your peace of mind alone is worth the cost and with insurance you know just how much your trip will cost; without insurance, an accident might take all your cash for the rest of your life to pay for. See Joe Welch, agt.

Mr. John Winters of Aurburndale is having his farm home enlarged and succeeded these days.

Improvements are being made at the home of Mr. R. A. Snyder in town and decorations there are in order.

Mrs. Frank Smart of Edmonton is in town spending a holiday with her brother Mr. D. W. Dawson.

A big addition is being made to the rear of the Hero cafe premises on Main street. This will be fully fireproof and is to give room for refreshment booths and ice-cream parlors. Mike Stang has a bunch of men busy on the job.

The Public Works' chairman of the Council is busy this week getting the road made along first avenue west to the refinery. George Murray is in charge of the work with the big municipal grader. We learn the hospital road is to have some attention too!

June and July are the best months to do your painting as your buildings are dry. Good house paint at the Atlas yard from $2.50 per gallon up. Joe Welch will advise you.

Mr. Leo O'Reilly is treating all his buildings on the farm to couple coats of paint these days.

We sympathize with Mr. Dave Vesey who has been on the sick list for the past couple of weeks. He is a patient at the hospital.

Her many friends will be pleased to know that Mrs. J. A. Mackenzie has now returned from hospital in Edmonton after quite a stay there. She arrived back home on Friday last and feels much improved in health.

A record crowd was to be seen at King's Park on Sunday last and water sports were the order of the day in an effort to keep cool.

Happy no one was injured in the collision which occurred when a car owned by a party from Edmonton ran into the Wainwright bus one night last week.

A drive around the territory at the week-end plainly showed the seriousness of the situation unless rains fall very quickly. In lots of places the wheat is done so far as a crop is concerned, and taken generally the fields look pretty sickly!

The sales of amica and liniment should be good these days in town, for on almost every vacant space a softball game is played each evening. The old boys gallop around the bases at a speed they haven't used for forty years (!) and are carrying heavy handbags in weight and gait, but, boy, do they have fun! We'll say they do!

Mr. J. W. Fraser has a gang of men (mostly from Wainwright) laying asphalt sidewalks in Lloydminster and Murville these days.

Mr. Dick Hadyn suffered quite a loss when his car caught fire on the highway last week. Happily no one was injured and the flames were soon under control.

Congratulations to the Wainwright Motors this week in that they won second prize (a handsome mantel clock) in Alberta agency sales of new Ford cars for the month of May.

Mrs. H. Coderre is now back from her stay in hospital in the city.

Mrs. A. Horne, who has been spending some months in Vancouver, returned to Wainwright last week with her little son Gerald.

Monday last was the day of longest sunshine for 1937, and Old Sol was on the job from 4:04 a.m. until 9:17 p.m. The days will gradually shorten now, and the light bills gradually creep upwards again!

Mr. Chas. Hawthorne was over to Vegreville for a drive on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wheaton have again moved back to their farm holdings south of town after a short residence in town.

Mr. R. T. Wright is gradually getting settled in his new business quarters opposite the Town Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Davidson were in town over the week-end from Didsbury, Alta.

A new light delivery truck has been placed in service for the National Park. Mr. E. Erickson drove it from Saskatoon on Saturday.

Mr. H. Lepper has now returned Mr. Syd. Worton, formerly of The Star staff and who has spent the last eight months in England with relatives, has returned home to To-field. He was in town for two or three days at the week-end.

Mrs. L. Rees formerly residing here, was in town with her daughter Phyllis for a day last week as the guest of Miss E. Love.

Mr. Lester Wismell, with his sister and sister-in-law arrived from Detroit, Mich., to visit with Mrs. B. Nordstrom and relatives in town last week.

A certain editor in Missouri refuses to publish obituary notices of people who, while living, failed to subscribe to his newspaper, and gives this pointed reason: "People who do not take the home town paper are dead anyway, and their passing has no news value!"

Mr. Gordon Graham, who was away to Lethbridge at the annual Canadian Legion convention has now returned home.

Mr. W. H. Heffernan spent a few days in Macklin, Sask., last week looking after his business interests there. He reports crops as being very poor in the timber in the territory he passed through on his trip.

Having enjoyed a trip to her old home in the States, Mrs. B. Karman has now returned home.

Mrs. J. Tomic and her daughter Margaret, who have been visiting relatives and friends in Eastern Canada, returned home last week.

We only notice one or two of the business building indications to comply with the fire bylaw. Possibly others have the matter in mind, however. We can't understand why several trucks are to be seen around town without any license plates attached at all. Maybe these have dropped from the vehicles unnoticed(?)

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Guy Tory has been under the weather for a few days.

The new big box which is to be placed on the new E & W truck is nearing completion and is expected to be attached this week.

Mr. F. H. H. Williamson, from Ottawa, was in town over the week-end in the course of his annual visit as controller of national parks.

Arrangements are being made for the third annual picnic of the Farmers' Unity League at the Battle River bridge on Wednesday, July 21st. All kinds of sports and a good dance at night.

Quite a large number of the services were represented on the "Veterans" team (medical, dental, air force, bombers, and the good old "waddies") in the softball game played on Monday evening against the "Wheat Puffs" when the latter aggregation proved victorious in a game well fought and full of pep.

The delatessant sale by the ladies of the United church is being held on Saturday next in the Brunner showrooms.

Mr. Wm. Fox is now around again after suffering with a broken rib caused by his being thrown from a plow recently.

Complimenting Miss Rosalie Callias, a merry party was held at her home last week to mark the occasion of her "coming of age."
